

Case Study

O'Donnell Sweeney Eversheds, Solicitors

More than mobile e-mail

Company Background

O'Donnell Sweeney Eversheds is a full service commercial Irish law firm with an international outlook and a network of associated firms throughout the world.

Based in a state of the art premises at the heart of Dublin's commercial district, the firm has 77 fee earners and more than 140 employees.

The Challenge

Provide fee earners and support staff with secure access to e-mail and key business applications.

O'Donnell Sweeney Eversheds wanted to enable staff to remotely access business applications from their existing mobile handheld devices. The solution needed to support the wide variety of devices used by employees and comply with existing security policies and procedures. As a critical part of the practice infrastructure, the solution needed to be constantly available and resilient to outages.

The Solution

With AccessMyLan, O'Donnell Sweeney Eversheds are able to provide secure access to their office network and applications from any mobile handheld device. Employees with entry-level business phones have full e-mail access while smartphone users have access to Intranet and document repository applications.

To address the requirement for service availability, O'Donnell Sweeney Eversheds implemented AccessMyLan in a highly available configuration using multiple VPN Agents.

The Benefits

- Employees have capability to access e-mail and corporate applications
- Employees able to retain existing mobile handsets
- Easily managed from AccessMyLan web site
- No additional servers or applications required
- Complies with corporate security policies
- Highly available service
